

In the Claims:

Please cancel Claims 2 – 5, 7, 8, 13 – 16, 18, 21, and 22;

Please amend Claims 1, 6, 9, 12, 17, 19, and 20; and

Please add new Claims 23 – 25, as follows:

CLAIMS

1. (Currently Amended) A reversible drape comprising:
a first decorative fabric, a second decorative fabric, and a liner fabric;
wherein said drape is reversible to a first orientation wherein said first fabric is visible on a front side of the drape and the liner fabric is visible on a back side of the drape; and wherein said drape is reversible to a second orientation wherein said second fabric is visible on the front side of the drape and the liner fabric is visible on the back side of the drape;
wherein said first fabric and second fabric each have exposed sides that are visible in the first orientation and the second orientation respectively, and each have hidden sides that are not visible in the first orientation and not visible in the second orientation, and wherein the first fabric, second fabric, and liner fabric are sewn together at side seams, and raw edges of said side seams are hidden inside said drape between the said hidden sides of the first and second fabrics;
wherein a portion of the first decorative fabric is formed into a first heading adapted to connect to a drapery rod, a portion of the second decorative fabric is formed into a second heading adapted to connect to a drapery rod, and the first heading and the second heading are located on opposite ends of the drape and each comprise a header and a rod pocket; and wherein the drape is reversible into said first orientation and said second orientation through an opening in said liner fabric, so that, in the first orientation, the first heading is exposed for connection to the drapery rod and the second heading is enclosed and hidden from view inside an interior space of the drape, and so that, in the second orientation, the second heading is exposed for connection to the drapery rod and the first heading is enclosed and hidden from view inside the interior space of the drape.

2. (Cancelled)
3. (Cancelled)
4. (Cancelled)
5. (Cancelled)
6. (Currently Amended) The drape of Claim 1[[4]], wherein the first heading and the second heading each comprise pleats.
7. (Cancelled)
8. (Cancelled)
9. (Currently Amended) The drape of Claim 1[[8]], wherein the opening extends substantially all the way across the drape.
10. (Original) The drape of Claim 1, wherein said liner fabric is blackout fabric.
11. (Original) The drape of Claim 1, wherein said liner fabric is UV-resistant fabric.
12. (Currently Amended) A reversible drape comprising:

a first decorative fabric on a front side of the drape, and a liner fabric on a back side of the drape, the drape further having an interior space defined by an interior surface of the drape and an opening into the interior surface, wherein said interior surface is a second decorative fabric and the liner fabric;

wherein the drape is reversible through said opening so that the drape is turned inside out to place the second decorative fabric on the front side of the drape, the first decorative fabric in the interior space of the drape defining the interior surface, and the liner fabric remaining on the back side of the drape;

wherein said drape has a first heading at one end of the drape comprising said first decorative fabric and that is exposed and connectable to a drapery rod only when the drape is reversed to make the first decorative fabric visible on the front side of the drape, and wherein said drape has a second heading at an opposing end of the drape comprising said second decorative fabric and that is exposed and connectable to a drapery rod only when the drape is reversed to make the second decorative fabric visible on the front side of the drape; and wherein said first decorative fabric, second decorative fabric, and liner fabric are sewn together at left and right side edges, forming seams with raw edges, and wherein said raw edges are hidden inside the drape when the drape is in any of its reversible orientations.

13. (Cancelled)

14. (Cancelled)

15. (Cancelled)

16. (Cancelled)

17. (Currently Amended) A reversible drape comprising:

a second decorative fabric on a front side of the drape, and a liner fabric on a back side of the drape, the drape further having an interior space defined by an interior surface of the drape and an opening into the interior surface, wherein said interior surface is a first decorative fabric and the liner fabric;

wherein said first decorative fabric, second decorative fabric, and liner fabric are sewn together at left and right side edges, forming seams with raw edges, and wherein said raw edges are hidden inside the drape when the drape is in any of its reversible orientations;

wherein said drape has a first heading at one end of the drape, and a second heading at an opposing end of the drape, and wherein said opening is between said one end of the drape and said opposing end of the drape; and

wherein the drape is reversible through said opening so that the drape is turned inside out to place the first decorative fabric on the front side of the drape, the second decorative fabric in the interior space of the drape defining the interior surface, and the liner fabric remaining on the back side of the drape.

18. (Cancelled)

19. (Currently Amended) The drape of Claim 17[[8]], wherein said first heading comprises said first decorative fabric and is exposed and connectable to a drapery rod when the drape is reversed to make the first decorative fabric visible on the front side of the drape.
20. (Currently Amended) The drape of Claim 17[[8]], wherein said second heading comprises said second decorative fabric and is exposed and connectable to a drapery rod when the drape is reversed to make the second decorative fabric visible on the front side of the drape.
21. (Cancelled)
22. (Cancelled)
23. (New) The reversible drape of Claim 1, wherein the opening is between said opposite ends of the drape.
24. (New) The reversible drape of Claim 12, wherein the opening is between said one end of the drape and said opposing end of the drape.
25. (New) The reversible drape of Claim 17, wherein the opening is generally midway between said one end of the drape and said opposing end of the drape.